FIGHTING POVERTY WITH HONEY

In Kenya, approximately fifty per cent of the land is suitable for beekeeping. Yet, the potential of beekeeping and honey production has not been tapped in many areas. Traditionally, lack of market, knowledge and the poor quality of the honey from rudimentary hives meant that honey sales were usually to producers of local liquor.

Bee-keepers were also prone to exploitation by more knowledgeable middlemen. With the diffusion of its model of sustainable community-based beekeeping, Honey Care Africa (HCA) has been able to provide solutions to overcome these impediments.

HCA links environmental conservation and poverty reduction by providing beehives and related beekeeping equipment to communities. Therefore, HCA organisation plays a vital role in Kenya.
